> Jeff Jenkins wonders why radio doesn't play more Australian music.

Sarah Carroll

WAHINE

"When you first met me," Sarah Carroll sings on her second solo album, "I was just a little lady, a black and white world is now colour." Carroll started out in country girl group Git. Now, she's blazing her own trail, defying easy categorisation. "I know what you're up to," she declares, "you're trying to cut me to size." Wahine is an album of many moods, from raucous to reflective, with Carroll's storytelling complemented by some stellar guests, including producer Marcel Borrack, Andy Baylor and labelmate Dan Warner. Surf's up! Wahine is an exquisite country collection.
